MICROCURRENT TECHNOLOGY

"The Exercise - Total Workout You Need to Look Good for Eternity"

What is Microcurrent: A bio-stimulation using small amounts of electricity.

Microcurrent gives various intensities for muscle and or myo-filaments responses. These responses are important to increase ATP (Adenosine Triphosphate) response. This process increases the blood flow for cellular regeneration which increases growth.

It is the muscle cell we are focusing our efforts with; if you improve the blood capillary response then you are improving the cell's metabolic rate which may relate to wound healing and growth of a stronger collagen response. Think about daily exercise how we increase the blood capillary which increases the amount of oxygen, nutrients, and water to our cell's health. Microcurrent gives you the same advantage as well. "It is the total workout for the prevention of aging."

Microcurrent started in the 1830's and studied more intensely in the 1960's this technology has grown in the past 5-7 years with having an impact with anti-aging benefits to the esthetic industry and other medical practices.

How does this relate to turning back the hands of time? In a big way; this technology is a bio stimulator so therefore you are creating an enhanced environment for blood stimulation, lymphatic stimulation, and cellular stimulation through increasing cellular metabolism. In a nut shell you are creating muscle to fixate better to bone and skin to fixate better to muscle. Results: More of a youthful appearance with a lifted - toned look to your skin.

Most women like not having the down time, creating an individualized program that works. They want the perfect way to finally get results. This is a procedure that you may incorporate your injections like Botox™ and or fillers like Radiesse® to obtain a youthful, sculpted look that you desire. For women that do not want those extra boosts will have the advantage of enhancing their natural beauty by refreshing, restructuring, and replenishing their features to a vibrant youthful appearance.
